Covid in prisons

Source: Editorial, Dawn, Islamabad, 2020-12-21

PAKISTAN'S overcrowded prisons are a Petri dish for disease even during 'normal' times. During a pandemic, however, the inmates are at an even more grave risk. In the confined space, social distancing and other public health precautions become next to impossible to implement. The individuals detained become, in effect, sitting ducks for exposure to the virus. Prisoners of the Pan.....more >>

Aid crisis

The Covid-19 pandemic has not only highlighted the chink in the armour of neo-liberalism and capitalism, it also presents an unprecedented challenge to the global humanitarian system in both scale and complexity. According to recent reports, more than one billion people around the world are currently affected by long-term humanitarian crises which include conflicts, natural disasters and displacem.....more >>

An out of control situation

Source: Editorial, Daily Times, 2020-12-21

The second wave of the coronavirus is getting out of control very fast. It seems the smart idea of the smart lockdown that got us out of the first wave so nicely is just not working this time. Experts believe the virus has mutated and now not just spreads much faster but also tends to finish off infected patients a lot quicker than before. That explains the sudden surge that both the number of inf.....more >>

Prisoners of pandemic

Source: Waqar Gillani, The News, International, 2020-12-20

In Pakistan, prisons are notoriously crowded, making physical distancing and other public health recommendations impossible to implement, a recent Amnesty International report suggests. They lack adequate health-care facilities and have unsanitary conditions, accelerating the spread of infectious diseases. These and other underlying systemic issues lead to a catalogue of human rights violat.....more >>

While this figure is likely lower than the actual number due to weak testing capacity, even if it was tenfold higher, the spread of the virus in the US and many European nations still overshadow it. Despite this, the pandemic is a much harder blow economically to the world's 80 million displaced people than for those in affluent societies. Here are three things we got wrong about the.....more >>

A people's vaccine

Source: Mustafa Talpur, The News, International, 2020-12-19

The latter half of November brought hope for a world facing the unprecedented public health challenge of the Covid-19 pandemic. Three pharmaceutical companies announced the results of their vaccine trials with a successful rate of over 90 percent. The UK was the first country to approve and administer the Pfizer /BioNTech vaccine. Soon after, American regulators also cleared this vaccine.more >>

Challenging Days Ahead

Source: Editorial, The Nation, Islamabad, 2020-12-21

It is sad to observe that people across the country are taking the second wave of coronavirus too lightly. People's negligence while ignoring the government's safety protocols has only made Lahore the hotspot of the pandemic. We see once again that families are going out shopping with no regard for social distancing and avoiding crowded places as Christmas is around the corner. They ar.....

As much as we all rightfully lament the scars of this Covid-19 inflicted year, there are many lessons that we should be carrying with us into the new year in 2021, InshaAllah. I summarise a few of these below. Lesson 1: Pakistan is not always unlucky. The original first wave of the Covid-19 pandemic was supposed to destroy the healthcare system, take hundreds of thousands of lives and leav.....

Vaccine bond sales to soar to fund COVID-19 shots for poor countries

Source: Karin Strohecker and Tommy Wilkes, Business Recorder, Islamabad, 2020-12-23

Socially conscious bond investors will be targeted in a coming wave of vaccine bond deals that will seek to provide billions of dollars for the speedy rollout of COVID-19 shots for developing countries. Dedicated vaccine bonds have been deployed before, but the immediate COVID-19 funding needs should lead to large amounts of new issuance in 2021. "There is no doubt that investors v.....
